[2 February, 2012]

Tairiscint: (atógáil) (0.02 n. fágtha):
Motion (resumed) (0.02 m. remaining):

2. “That Seanad Éireann, noting that:

- research on behalf of the Environmental Protection Agency shows that Irish consumers throw away 1 million tonnes of food a year which is approximately 30% of food bought;
- the average person throws out almost 300kg of ‘black bin rubbish’ every year, and about one third of this waste is food waste. This is the equivalent of 3,750 apples;
- this waste costs every household in Ireland about €1,000 per year;
- restaurants dispose of about €125 million worth of food every year;
- wastage is a huge financial cost to the State through the dumping of it in landfills;
- food wastage is a major factor in greenhouse gas emissions through rotting;
- food is inadequately labelled and its true origin is often obscured to the consumer;
- food is inadequately labelled in terms of content;
- there is a childhood obesity epidemic with over 300,000 children considered obese;
- most requirements of the new EU Food Information Regulations requirements do not apply until 2014 and nutrition labelling will become mandatory in 2016;

calls on the Government to introduce proper food labelling to improve information to consumers and other food safety measures:

- including the provision of ‘consume by’ dates of food products, in tandem with the ‘best before’ and ‘sell by’ dates’ (that is, many foods are in fact edible after the ‘best before’ or the ‘sell by’ or ‘display until’ dates which used by retailers) to reduce food wastage;

- immediately ensure verifiable country of origin” labelling on all farm produce sold by retailers to ensure that consumers are not confused and undermine local producers by passing off imports as Irish as is the case currently (e.g. through the use of tricolors, shamrocks, green labels etc.) — especially as the EU debate about country of origin labelling has effectively been postponed;
- ensure that terms like “Irish food” can only be used after specific criteria are satisfied — by doing so, it will help to stimulate growth in the economy by allowing consumers to buy produce verifiably produced in Ireland;
- include labelling on food so that Irish consumers know exactly from where their products are originating;
- given that it is estimated that up to 25% of an individual’s carbon footprint is associated with their diet; consider the introduction of labelling for products with at least 25% greenhouse gas savings (as in Sweden) to provide consumers with the ability to make an informed choice and with the ability to see how some products are more sustainable than others;
- introduce labelling with clearer food storage instructions to reduce waste;
- consider the introduction of simpler food labelling for food products aimed at children;
- teach primary schoolchildren more effectively about food and food labelling, emphasising healthy eating and continue to examine existing advertising regulations with regard to children and clarify the potential tax on fatty foods; and
- welcomes the European Commission’s proposal for the introduction, for the first time and on a voluntary basis, of an electronic identification system (EID) for bovine animals by repealing the current provisions on voluntary beef labelling; and to consider additional measures to reduce waste, including, but not limited to:

- introducing a proper system for distributing leftover food to those most in need and to the appropriate charities; including ensuring that any catering procured by the State will be required to redistribute that food to vulnerable groups;
- encouraging retailers to allow ‘2 for 1’ offers to be redeemed at a later date through a voucher system, discouraging waste; and
- encouraging producers and retailers to reduce packaging including the introduction of biodegradable packaging and packaging that keeps fresh produce edible for longer in addition to making packaging easier to open for the elderly or disabled.”.

—Senators Feargal Quinn, Mary-Ann O’Brien.

Leasuithe:

Amendments:

1. To delete all words after “Seanad Éireann” and substitute the following:

“noting that:

- minimisation and management of food waste is being addressed under the National Waste Prevention Programme and the plan covering the period 2009-2012;

- the Waste Management (Food Waste) Regulations 2009, on commercial food waste, introduced by the Department of the Environment, Community and Local Government, include a requirement that from 1 July 2010, the commercial sector have the food waste it generates segregated and collected separately and also imposes obligations on the major sources of food waste such as hot food outlets and institutions;
- the Waste Management (Landfill Levy) Regulations 2011 provide for an increase in the landfill levy to €50 per tonne from 1 September 2011 and that there is a commitment to further increases;
- the General food labelling Directive 2000/13/EC (S.I. No. 483 of 2002) requires indication of the place of origin where failure to give such particulars might mislead the consumer to a material degree and EU food information regulations will provide additional information to the consumer;
- according to IUNA data, children are not eating the recommended portions of milk, fresh meat and fruit and vegetables;

considers that these measures will improve Ireland's performance in relation to food waste, and in particular:

- notes the launch by the Minister for the Environment, Community and Local Government of the Green Public Procurement Action Plan in January 2012, which aims to implement green public procurement in favour of more resource efficient, less polluting goods services and works;
- highlights that food and catering services are a priority area for green procurement and that contracting parties will be required to deal with food waste in compliance with the National Composting Standard;
- emphasises that the sustainability of the agri-food sector in Ireland provides consumers in Ireland and further afield with environmental assurance, welcomes in this regard schemes such as the Bord Bia Beef and Lamb Quality Assurance Scheme, developed in partnership with Teagasc and the Carbon Trust. This includes traceability back to the farm and carbon measurement on the farm as well as an indication of origin;
- remarks that Country of Origin labelling is currently mandatory for beef, fish, honey, olive oil and fresh fruit and vegetables and for other products when its absence might mislead the consumer; that this is being extended to other meats and that the European Commission will carry out a feasibility study on the possibility of extending country of origin labelling requirements to other foods including ingredients that represent more than 50% of a food;
- notes that the DAFM is supporting research into anaerobic digestion, utilisation of by-products of processing and fruit and vegetable waste in particular and considers that it is important that the findings of such research are commercialised and used on a wide scale;
- encourages more schools to take up the EU school milk scheme;
- notes that the Food Dude/EU school fruit scheme, managed by Bord Bia and funded by DAFM, has now been rolled out to over half of primary school children and that evaluations of the scheme have consistently shown increased consumption of fruit and vegetables;
- recommends wider publicity of the Stop Food Waste Programme (www.StopFoodWaste.ie) and the www.foodwaste.ie and the EPA publication “Less Food Waste — More Profit” which provides advice to consumers and operators on buying, storage and low waste cookery tips such as buying what is required, taking note of existing stock, checking use-by dates and understanding the differences between Use-by, Best before and Sell by dates, and on how to compost any residual food waste, as easy access to information and advice could have a substantial impact on individual consumer decisions and national patterns of consumer and operator behaviour.”.

[28 June, 2012]

7. “That Seanad Éireann condemns the failure of this and previous Governments to implement the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive despite the judgement of the European Court of Justice; and notes, in particular, that the ECJ has ruled that Ireland has not satisfactorily implemented article 3 of the directive which deals with the negative consequences of split decisions in planning between Irish planning authorities and the Irish Environment Protection Agency.

Seanad Éireann expresses its concern at the result that this failure may have had on major planning decisions such as the Corrib Gas Pipeline.”.

—Senators David Cullinane, Trevor Ó Clochartaigh, Kathryn Reilly.

[4 July, 2012]

8. “That Seanad Éireann:

recognises that there are 1,400 children in Ireland with life limiting conditions, who have complex needs throughout life and additional needs as they near death, with 350 such child deaths each year;

commends the tremendous work being done by organisations such as the Jack & Jill Children’s Foundation and the Irish Hospice Foundation on behalf of many of these children by providing nursing care and support, as well as offering some respite to parents and families;

notes with grave concern that there is no national home nursing care programme or budget for children with life limiting conditions, which, in many incidences: contravenes the best interests of the child; places an excessive burden on acute services; and imposes a hidden cost on the taxpayer;

notes that putting in place a dedicated national home nursing care budget for children with life limiting conditions is in line with the Programme for Government commitment to a personal budget model ‘so that people with disabilities or their families have the flexibility to make choices that suit their needs best’, the policy, Palliative Care for Children with Life-Limiting Conditions in Ireland — A National Policy, 2010 and Ireland’s international obligations under the UN Convention on the Rights of Children;

recognises the economic advantage of putting the right supports in place for parents to care for their children with life limiting conditions at home, as set out in the Report ‘There’s No Place Like Home — A Cost and Outcomes Analysis of Alternative Models of Care for Young Children with Severe Disabilities in Ireland’ 2010, which found at €147,365 per year for hospital care, as compared to €16,422 per child for Jack & Jill home nursing care, that the average annual cost for hospital care for a severely disabled child is nine times more expensive. Therefore, the Jack & Jill Children’s Foundation has saved the State up to €235 million since 1997, when multiplied by the 1,600 families supported at the cost of hospital care;

appreciates that over the past 15 years, the Jack & Jill Children’s Foundation has raised €36 million privately to fund its nationwide service, while the HSE grant during this same period was €4 million; acknowledges the recommendations of the Value for Money and Policy Review of Disability Services in Ireland published July 2012, which emphasises keeping the child/patient at home and the money following the patient principle; recalls with approval Ireland’s ratification of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child on 28 September 1992 and welcomes the explicit recognition of the family as the ‘fundamental group of society and the natural environment for the growth and wellbeing of all its members and particularly children’; and maintains, in keeping with Article 9 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (Separation from parents), that where there is no overriding medical necessity to the contrary, it is in the best interests of children with life limiting conditions to be cared for at home.

Calls on the Minister for Health to:

1. recognise the impact of not having a dedicated budget for a national home nursing care programme for children with life limiting conditions in place, which results in: inconsistent supports between regions; ad hoc funding for home nursing care for children with life limiting conditions; tremendous stress and unacceptable pressure on parents, whose energies are diverted to trying to secure resources to support their child at home; and

2. as a matter of urgency to commit to put in place a national home nursing care programme for children with life limiting conditions with a dedicated and trackable budget which will immediately result in savings for the State and uphold the best interests of the child.”.
